The truth about social freezing

Egg freezing can be a great option – but it's not for everyone. Studies show that up to 92% of women never use their frozen eggs, either because they conceive naturally or decide not to have children. The best time is usually between 32–35, if you know you want a family, but don't have the right partner yet. Remember: freezing eggs is not a guarantee of a baby, as the uterus also ages and pregnancy risks rise after 40. We believe in honest guidance – let's talk openly about your options.
